

HR Capability Building For HR Practitioners and Managers

Change management and internal consulting skills to design, drive and implement people management projects for real business value.

OVERVIEW

Why you need this

The political, social and business environment is changing at a rapid rate. Businesses are required to continually refocus, restructure and respond to change in order to cope with the diverse demands. High performing individuals and teams are becoming more and more important to deliver the strategic and operational goals. There is a need for greater capacity and strategic focus in the delivery of Human Resource strategies and processes. HR business partners need to have the capability to engage as partners with line managers, to listen and to diagnose problems and opportunities, to design and plan systems, processes and interventions and most importantly to deliver on promises made.

The purpose of the workshop is to learn about critical internal consulting tools and processes and have the opportunity to practice these in a group environment. This ensures instant feedback to build the awareness and effectiveness of the internal HR consultant.
